wood, with a club m one hand and a golden key in the other, made a speech, after which he deli\ ered the key to the Queen, who alighted from her horse and embraced the Lady Montague and her daughter, the Lady Dormir

The next day being Sunday, the Queen rested and was most royally feasted, the portion for breakfast being three oxen and one hundred and forty geese

On Monday, about eight o'clock in the morning, the Queen and her tram rode out into the park to a delicate bower which had been prepared for her Here while the musicians played, a nymph delivered her a cross-bow with which to shoot at the deer, some thirty in number, enclosed in a paddock The Queen killed some three or four, and the Countess of Kildare one

The rest of the week was spent in feasting and entertainment, and on Friday the 2oth, the Queen moved from Cowdray to Chichester 22rd August THE BORDEAUX WINE FLEET TO BE STAYED.

An open placard is sent by the Council to all officers of the Port of London, the Cinque Ports and other ports on the south and west to stay all vessels about to trade with Bordeaux at the vintage time It is credibly reported that certain merchants intend to set out in a very disorderly manner, and not in one or more fleets, forgetting that the state is interested in their private loss and that those ships which went unprotected last year have not yet returned

2Stb August MR THOMAS CAVENDISH'S EXPEDITION

Mr Thomas Cavendish hath departed two days since from Plymouth with his fleet of three tall ships and two barks, The Galleon, wherein Mr Cavendish himself sails, being the Admiral, The Roebuck., vice-admiral, whereof Mr Corke is

Captain, The Desire, with Mr John Davis as Captain, The Black Pinnace, and a bark of Adrian Gilbert, commanded by Mr Randolph Cotton

$ist August RUMOURS

The Queen is said to be at Portsmouth, having been at Chichester, whither she came from Lord Montague's at Cowdray, where she and the whole Court were magnificently entertained. Nothing is heard from Normandy from the Earl of Essex From